FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE—

U. S. Forces in Austria

BY LT. GEN. GEORGE P. HAYS, USA
Commanding General

U. S. Forces in Austria, a separate command, are charged with the mission of supporting the U. S. High Commissioner of Austria in his effort to reestablish a democratic Austria with a sound economy capable of insuring an adequate standard of living.

The importance of this small but strategically-located country is noted when studying a map of Europe. From the standpoint of western Europe security, Austria constitutes the Eastern-most salient of the free nations of West Europe.

This mountainous country has common borders with two of the Soviet satellites—Czechoslovakia and Hungary—forms the southern flank of Germany, and extends to the northern boundaries of Italy and Yugoslavia.

Important for its water and trade routes, Austria boasts the Rhine-Danube, main waterway of Europe, which borders the U. S. Zone on the north and flows on through Vienna. The north-south route through the Brenner Pass to Italy is the most important rail and highway route through the Alps. The southwest routes from Russia and Poland intersect with the others to make this a "cross-roads" country.

U. S. Forces in Austria (USFA) are composed of four military posts at Salzburg, Vienna, Linz, and Leghorn, Italy. The latter is USFA's Port of Embarkation from which the logistical support emanates.

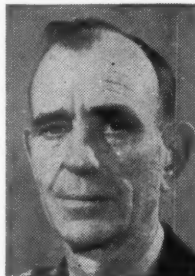

The Festival City of Salzburg is the site of the largest concentration of U. S. troops, quartered in various camps around the city. Here USFA headquarters are located.

Traveling eastward, famous landmark in the Linz Military Post area, is the Soviet checkpoint at Enns, last outpost before starting the 110-mile trip through the Soviet Zone to Vienna.

Vienna is divided into four sectors, plus the International zone, which are administered directly by the Vienna Inter-Alled command. This command consists of one city commander and deputy from each of the four Powers, and each has a representative for administering the International bezirk (district).

Each month, a different Power assumes control of the International bezirk. During July, the French administered, with

AF Tells Details On Fall Promotion Plans

The Air Force this week announced the zones of consideration for forthcoming selections for permanent lieutenant colonel and major.

At the same time, there were unofficial reports that an announcement will be made shortly—possibly next week—concerning convening of selection boards in the Fall to place officers on recommended lists for temporary promotions to captain, major, lieutenant colonel and colonel.

The Air Force has said that selections will be made for advancement to these temporary ranks and reported that the first temporary promotions would be to fill vacancies in general officer ranks.

These promotions have been made, as reported in last week's issue of THE JOURNAL. Therefore, it must be expected that details will follow regarding selection of officers for promotion to temporary ranks of captain, major, lieutenant colonel and colonel.

It is known that tentative plans have been formulated and were under Pentagon review this week.

These details were announced concerning the permanent selection board which will be convened on 17 Nov.

For permanent promotion to lieutenant colonel, Air Force officials estimate that consideration may extend through the following named permanent majors. The "fully qualified" method of selection will be used.

USMC Skips Col's Board; Now Selecting Lt. Col's

The Marine Corps has by-passed its annual selection board to name officers for promotion to colonel, THE JOURNAL learned this week.

The disclosure came as the result of queries which uncovered information that a board to select officers for promotion to lieutenant colonel is already meeting at Headquarters and has been in session for more than two weeks. Although the latter board was convened on 3 Sept., the action was not made public at that time.

It was learned that while no definite decision has been made on the fate of the colonels' board, the Marine Corps has decided not to hold up other boards in the meantime. The announcement this week said that 186 of "the most senior Marine majors on active duty are to be selected for temporary promotion" by the board which is now in session. Both Regu-

Pentagon Will Ask White House O. K. For Pay Adjustment Unless C-of-L Declines

Mrs. Rosenberg's Statement

"Last year the Department of Defense, with the concurrence of the Bureau of the Budget and the approval of the President, proposed to the Congress a ten-per cent across-the-board increase in the pay and allowances of members of the Armed Forces to compensate them for the increase in the cost of living since 1949.

"In 1949 the scales of military pay and allowances were established by the Congress, based upon the report of a civilian commission of independent experts headed by Mr. Charles R. Hook. The Commission reported, after a long and exhaustive study of all aspects of the problem. Its recommended pay scales were based upon the cost of living current in 1949. The actual pay scales established by the Congress in 1949 were slightly less than those recommended by the Hook Commission.

"One of the principal recommendations of the Commission was that the pay and allowances of members of the Armed Forces should be adjusted to reflect any changes in

Army Promotes 400 To Capt. and Major

Recommended List to Colonel, Page 80
Promotions to Capt. and Maj., Page 81

Army temporary promotions were moving along at a rate comparable with last month's 1082 total as 200 first lieutenants were advanced to captain and 200 captains were promoted to major.

These promotions marked the second September increments of advancements to captain and major and it is anticipated there will be second increment promotions to lieutenant colonel and colonel next week. Last week's issue reported 536 promotions to the four grades.

Here is an up-to-the minute summary on the temporary promotion picture for each grade:

To Captain—The 200 promotions this week, announced in Special Orders No. 185 and effective from 15 Sept., extend through a cut-off date of 22 Dec. 1947. There were 49 Regular Army, 148 Reserve and three National Guard officers promoted from the eligibility list which was published in the 30 Aug. issue of THE JOURNAL. The new promotions go through No. 402 on the recommended list. As has been reported previously, the Army anticipates that the complete recommended list to captain will be exhausted by the end of the year.

To Major—The 200 promotions this week, announced in Special Orders No. 187 and effective from 17 Sept., extend through a cut-off date of 23 Oct. 1946. There were 34 Regular Army, 163 Reserve and three National Guard officers promoted from the eligibility list which was published in the 6 Sept. issue of THE JOURNAL. As is the case for the Unless there is a sharp and unexpected decline in the cost-of-living, the Department of Defense soon will ask President Truman to endorse a proposal for an upward adjustment of at least 6 per cent in military pay.

This was emphasized on two occasions this week by top Pentagon officials. Their statements are certain to bolster morale of men and women in uniform.

On 16 Sept., Secretary of Defense Robert A. Lovett was asked by a JOURNAL reporter at a press conference as to the status of the pay increase advocated last month by Assistant Secretary of Defense Anna M. Rosenberg.

Secretary Lovett replied that the whole subject was under study. He stated that under the facts developed so far it would be the purpose of the Department to recommend to the President that adjustments be made in military pay.

Demonstrating a detailed knowledge of the current pay situation, Secretary Lovett described how military pay scales have fallen behind recommendations of the Hook Commission, whose report formed the basis for the Career Compensation Act of 1949.

The day after Mr. Lovett's press conference, on 17 Sept., Assistant Secretary Rosenberg released a statement which declared that the pay problem is "under careful and intensive study... with a view towards developing a legislative proposal..."

The text of Assistant Secretary Rosenberg's statement is published herewith. This important Pentagon announcement came less than a week after THE JOURNAL on 13 Sept. pointed to the fact that while there had been forceful statements on the need for a cost-of-living pay boost for civilian employees of the Government, no Department of Defense official had made a comparable statement since the return of Mrs. Rosenberg from an inspection trip to Europe.

This week's developments will reassure military personnel that their interests and the health and comfort of their families will be safeguarded by Department of Defense officials. This is particularly important in view of the fact that last year the request for a military cost-of-living pay increase was not sent to Congress until action was practically completed on the 10 per cent pay increase for civilian employees.

The pay raise finally voted for military personnel was about half of the Pentagon's request, or about 5 per cent instead of 10 per cent and was effective 1 May 1952 instead of 1 July 1951. For retired personnel, the pay raise was only 4 per cent.

In her statement this week, Mrs. Rosenberg points out that since enactment of the Career Compensation Act, the cost-of-living has increased over 12 per cent.

F 86's Set New Monthly Record Kill of 47 Red MIG's; New "Gimmick" Helped

AMERICAN Sabre jets, aided by a new "gimmick" recently installed in these planes, this week took a steadily mounting toll of enemy MIG-15's, bringing the total Red aircraft destroyed during the first 17 days of September to 47—more than the number shot down during the best previous month of the war. The former monthly record was achieved last April when 42 enemy planes were destroyed.

Speculation attributed the recent marked success of the Sabres in air combat against the MIG's at least partially to the installation of an unspecified new gadget, referred to in a press conference by Air Secretary Thomas K. Finletter as giving American planes a decisive tactical advantage. No further statement was made as to whether this improvement related to engine performance, range, accuracy of gunnery, or had some other function.

9 MIGs in One Day

One of the best days of the Sabres occurred last Monday when at least nine MIG-15's were shot down. The American planes were flying cover for Allied fighter-bombers attacking targets deep in North Korea. Eighty MIG's streaked in from Manchurian bases to intercept the raiders, and clashed with 104 Sabres in a series of battles. In addition to the MIG's shot down, another was probably destroyed and two were damaged in this engagement.

Allied fighter-bombers, and light and medium bombers hit enemy military installations and industrial plants during the week, while carrier-based Navy and Marine planes plastered enemy lines of communications and front-line positions.

Major land fighting this week was largely limited to fierce battles for possession of the strategic adjacent heights on the central front, known as Capitol Hill and Finger Ridge. South Korean soldiers of the Capitol Division beat back repeated Chinese Red attacks on Capitol Hill, but were unable to dislodge the enemy from the crest of Finger Ridge, where some of the fiercest local hand-to-hand fighting of the war occurred this week. Elsewhere there were numerous patrol clashes, mostly at night, but the fighting was largely of a desultory character, with scarcely even local significance.

Operations of Allied warships along both coasts were almost entirely of a routine character, with action limited to bombardment of enemy shore batteries, lines of communication, transport facilities, and port installations.

Announcement was made this week that six Marine Panther jets and pilots were lost last week in a tragic accident, due to bad weather. Their home base was closed in on their return from a combat mission, and they were directed to another field. All planes were short of gas, and were following their leader, whose navigational instruments may have been faulty. The planes overshot the field and crashed, one after another, into mist-covered mountains.

Hit Bunker Hill

In the western sector of the long land battle line this week enemy groups of varying strengths made light probing attacks almost daily on United States Marine positions on Bunker Hill, east of Panmunjom. All of these attacks were repulsed by the Marines without difficulty.

An enemy attack was made on United Nations' positions north of Korangpo-ri. The Reds were repulsed after a brisk fight lasting nearly three hours. West of Chorwon an enemy group of undetermined strength hit an Allied outpost in a midnight attack, and was driven off after a brief skirmish. In the same area an Allied patrol clashed with an enemy platoon in a pre-dawn fight, killing or wounding a score of Reds.

The principal land fighting occurred in the central sector on the front of the South Korean Capitol Division early in the week. Using flame-throwers, bayonets, and hand grenades South Korean infantrymen early Sunday morning charged up Finger Ridge, and temporarily routed the Chinese Reds from their positions on the summit.

After a heavy mortar and artillery preparation, reinforced enemy troops counter-attacked through a dense fog. There was an hour-long, hand-to-hand battle for the crest, after which the outnumbered South Koreans withdrew down the south slopes of the ridge. Republic of Korea soldiers again attacked, but were able to regain the lost positions. The fighting was described as particularly fierce.

Drive Back Attacks

At about the same time the enemy made several light attacks on South Korean bunkers on Capitol Hill, but all were driven back. Enemy artillery and mortar fire on the central front was very heavy; most of it was directed against the Capitol Division. Allied artillery fire in this sector was also heavy, and prevented reinforcement of enemy troops attacking Capitol Hill.

An Allied patrol south of Pyonggang fought a brief engagement with an enemy platoon, killing and wounding a number of Reds. A brief enemy attack by a small unit on an Allied outpost east of the Pukhan River at midnight was easily repulsed. In another midnight encounter an Allied patrol fought briefly with four Red platoons southwest of Kumsong.

On the eastern front, four small enemy groups made probing attacks on advance United Nations positions in the Mundung Valley and east of the Punch Bowl. All were repulsed after brisk firefights.

Allied Ground troops on the extreme eastern front were materially aided by naval gunfire from warships in the Kojo-Kosong area. The U. S. Heavy Cruiser Toledo, arriving in Korean waters for a third tour, and the U. S. Destroyer Wedderburn fired at enemy bunkers, trenches, gun positions, and observation posts at the eastern terminus of the land battle line. Direct hits were scored, and many troop casualties were inflicted.

The U. S. Destroyer Tingey and the South Korean YMS 514 laid harassing fire on trucks moving south from Kojo, causing secondary explosions. With the aid of shore fire control these ships destroyed bunkers, gun positions, trenches and buildings. South of Wonsan, the U. S. Destroyer Cunningham fired on enemy installations, with unobserved results. Other Allied warships on blockade and patrol missions along the entire east coast of North Korea fired at targets of opportunity, hitting rail lines, rolling stock, motor vehicles, shore batteries, and port installations.

British Cruiser Busy

On the west coast the British Cruiser Belfast fired broadsides at gun positions and other shore facilities south of Chinampo. One hit sealed the entrance of an enemy-occupied cave. The Canadian Destroyer Iroquois shelled troops, bunkers and buildings south of Haeju, dispersing enemy formations.

Carrier planes from Task Force 77, off the east coast, hit the border city of Hoeryong, due north of Chongjin, and one of two major ports of entry, and rail terminals at the Siberian border. The other one is Musan, which was heavily hit by Navy planes on 1 Sept. In the raid on Hoeryong, which occurred last Saturday, 13 Sept., pilots from the U. S. Fast Carriers Princeton and Bon Homme Richard destroyed 14 barracks and damaged 34 others. They also destroyed four buildings on an airfield, 11 warehouses, a sawmill, a foundry, a gunpowder supply dump, 12 railway cars, and a locomotive.

Other Navy planes made renewed attacks on the battered Kyosen power stations. They also hit warehouses, other enemy-occupied buildings, bridges and rail lines south of Hungnam, and ranged along the east coast, making numerous cuts in enemy rail communications.

Marine pilots from the U. S. Escort Carrier Sicily dropped 1,000-lb. bombs on supply areas and troop billets in villages. Road bridges, radio stations, and gun emplacements were also hit.

Navy Launches First Guided Missile Planes

The first carrier-launched guided missile planes to be pitted against an enemy have been catapulted from the decks of the USS Boxer off Korea.

An eye-witness account from the Boxer this week told how a modified World War II Grumman Hellcat, carrying a 2,000 pound bomb, had been herded to a target 150 miles away by a mother plane piloted by Lt. Comdr. Lawrence A. Kurtz. Cameras aboard the "drone" recorded the flight and strike for television observers on the carrier.

Immediately following publication of the story, the Commander of Naval Forces in the Far East disclosed that "A number of guided missiles have been launched successfully against Communist targets in North Korea." In Washington, Rear Adm. John H. Sides, Director of the Navy's Guided Missile Division, said the operation was only a "primitive" attempt as far as guided missiles are concerned, that the Navy has "under development many advanced types."

While noting that the details of its system are "secret," the Navy said the guided missile attack is made in this way:

"A guide plane, carrying special electronic control equipment, is sent aloft. The missile, armed with a powerful warhead, is moved onto a catapult. A guide plane, aboard the carrier, sends the missile roaring skyward by means of electronic devices. As the missile reaches a pre-determined altitude, an airborne guide plane then takes over and directs the weapon to the target area. At the time the missile is ready to make its payoff dive, the guide plane is miles away, out of anti-aircraft range.

"An AD-2 Skyraider has been used as the guide plane in these initial missile attacks. All during its flight, from the deck of the carrier to the target, the progress of the missile is recorded in a specially equipped electronics room aboard the ship."

A team of five officers and seven enlisted men, headed by Commander Kurtz, make up the Navy's first operational guided missile unit (Guided Missile Unit No. 90). The unit was trained at the Naval Air Development Center, Johnsville, Pa., and is now operating aboard the carrier.

CADF Installations Chief

Col. James W. Smith has assumed the duties of Director of Installations for the Central Air Defense Force.

Prior to his Kansas City, Mo., assignment, Colonel Smith was Director of Engineering at Hq. Japan Air Defense Force, Nagoya.

Perm. Colonels' Status

The Army late this week was preparing to dispatch letters to some 1,000 permanent colonels with 30 years' service and five years in grade to notify them whether they will be retired or retained in 1953 and 1954.

It is now expected that the list of colonels who will be retained on active duty will be available for publication in next week's issue of THE JOURNAL.

Meantime, the Department of Defense has yet to approve officially Air Force recommendations concerning some 50 permanent colonels who face statutory retirement next year. There has been no denial, however, of published reports that the Air Force plans to retire all of these officers in accordance with permanent provisions of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947.

A Presidential Executive Order permits the retention of up to 60 per cent of the colonels. The belief is that the Army will keep in service about 60 per cent of the colonels slated for retirement in 1953 and 1954.

'Cold Spot' Coincides with Exercise 'Snow Storm'

Following recent announcement of plans for Exercise Snow Storm at Camp Drum, N. Y., during January, February and March, 1953, the Air Force has revealed plans for Exercise Cold Spot in the northern New York area during February and March.

General John K. Cannon, USAF, Commanding General, Tactical Air Command, Langley AFB, Va., said that participating units will be the 9th and 18th Air Forces, under Maj. Gen. Robert W. Douglass, Jr., Commander of the 18th Air Force, who has been designated air commander of the exercise.

"Cold Spot" will cover all phases of troop carrier and fighter-bomber operation under severe weather conditions. Part of the training for the Air Force will be coordinated with Army units participating in "Exercise Snow Storm."

Six troop carrier wings from the Eighteenth Air Force and one fighter-bomber wing from the Ninth Air Force are committed to "Cold Spot." Other tactical supporting units necessary to the Tactical Air Command mission are included in the exercise plan, such as reconnaissance, tactical control, assault, aero-medical and aerial port operations detachments.

The month-long cold weather training for these tactical units is designed to provide a realistic test of the operational lessons learned in previous winter exercises and of the experience of tactical units operating in Korea.

Set Limit On Japan Dependent Travel

The Armed Forces have placed a limitation of 500 families per month on dependent travel to the Far East Command. The housing shortage has forced imposition of the ceiling.

Pentagon officials said that this does not represent a cut in dependent travel, but at the same time it was conceded that no set limitation was observed previously.

THE JOURNAL's dependent travel file discloses, however, that last Fall, General Matthew B. Ridgway, then Commander-in-Chief of the Far East Command, urged that travel of dependents be doubled, if possible. At that time, the transportation capability was 1200 families per month.

A Pentagon office which is concerned with travel of dependents reports that the wait for availability of government quarters in Japan now extends from nine to 15 months.

The new limitation on dependent travel results from the administrative agreement between the United States and Japan calling for the return of about one-third of the government housing formerly available to U. S. military personnel and their dependents.

As these houses are vacated by rotation of personnel, they are returned to Japanese control.

At the present time, the Far East Command notifies military officials in the United States about two months in advance of dates when housing becomes available. Families are placed on priority lists and are sent to Japan as housing vacancies develop.

A Pentagon spokesman said the only exception to the 500 limitation is in the case of personnel who can certify possession of a contract to occupy non-government housing which meets the specifications of the commanding general concerned.

But sponsors who are able to obtain housing under private rental agreements are being forced to pay exorbitant rates.

Service Football Opens As Airmen Beat Marines

Service football got off to a fast start last week-end when two major teams, the Bolling Air Force Base Flyers and the Quantico Marines, clashed in Washington, D. C. The Flyers were victorious, 14-6. The Flyers' victory was the first they have recorded over Quantico since the two teams began playing each other in 1947.

In a thrill-packed game attended by a capacity crowd of 10,000, the Airmen prevented the Marines from scoring until the final four minutes of play when Marine Johnny Mazur (former Notre Dame quarterback) sparked a 32-yard drive which ended in a two-yard scoring run off-tackle by Ray Pendergraft (former Morehead State letterman).

Playing in 93-degree heat at the Air Force base, the two teams fielded a star-studded collection of players, including former Michigan State All-American Al Dorow, who led the Airmen, and former Oklahoma All-American Jim Weatherall, with the Marines.

Quarterback Dorow passed for the first Flyer touchdown and scored the second. He was carried from the field in the third quarter, a victim of heat prostration.

Correct MSTs Rates

Rates for "space available" travel aboard MSTs ships, listed in THE JOURNAL last week, were erroneous in two instances. Travel from the East Coast to Europe for retired enlisted personnel and their dependents is $20, and from the West Coast to Alaska the rate is $10 for the same category of personnel, not $50 and $20.

Occupational Therapy Chief

Capt. Kathryn Maurice has been appointed chief of the occupational therapy section at Walter Reed Army Medical Center. Her most recent assignment was at Letterman Army Hospital, San Francisco, Calif.

Open Choice Duty Billets For 35 Naval CPO Ratings

Choice foreign service billets for Naval enlisted personnel have been opened to chief petty officers in 35 ratings, for assignment to duty in Naval missions, offices of Naval attaches, military aid programs and similar activities, including Headquarters of the Allied Powers in Europe.

In addition, billets are open to first-class petty officers in 29 different ratings; second-class petty officers in 22 ratings; third-class petty officers in 12 ratings and seamen in five ratings.

Chiefs with the following ratings have been invited to submit requests for such duty to the Chief of Naval Personnel who will maintain a waiting list of qualified personnel who desire such assignments:

QM, GM, FC, DC, RM, RD, SO, MM, EN, AD, TM, MN, FT, ET, AL, AT, EM, IC, BT, ME, OM, TD, AG, YN, PN, TE, SK, AK, DK, JO, CS, UT, CM, HM and DT.

Ratings for other petty officer rates and seamen who wish to submit application are listed in BuPersInstruction 1306.6.

To qualify for such assignment, all personnel must be second-generation citizens of the U. S. of excellent character and discretion, and of unquestionable loyalty. They must have a high degree of proficiency in rate (as determined by quarterly marks and evaluation sheets), as well as clear naval and civilian records.

Other qualifications include not more than 17 years' service, solvency and language qualification (which, although desirable, is not mandatory).

Dependents

The Bureau of Personnel said that in view of the scarcity of quarters and difficult living conditions in many foreign countries, plus the high cost of transportation of dependents and household effects, "personnel with large families are not considered for assignment to this duty." CPO's in order to be eligible must not have more than three dependents; first-class petty officers may have no more than two dependents; second-class petty officers may have only one dependent, and those in lower grades may have none.

In addition, personnel on bureau- or fleet-administered shore duty (including fleet overseas shore duty) must be within three months of completing a normal tour. If at sea, personnel must have served at least one year.

Requests should be submitted in letter form to the Chief of Naval Personnel (Pers B211N), indicating assignment choice; number, age and location of all dependents, and any special qualifications not apparent from rate or job code. Commanding officers have been instructed to note in the forwarding endorsement whether the applicant has the ability to meet people and to represent the Navy on independent duty, as well as whether he has a pleasing personality (as evidenced by observation of his manner of address, conversation and neatness of person).

Personnel who meet all the requirements will be placed on the BuPers "mission and attaché eligibility list." Thereafter, each time personnel are required to fill authorized allowances or to replace personnel completing a tour, all personnel on the list with the required rate are considered and the one with the best qualifications is selected.

Adm. Hanlon Named in Korea

Rear Adm. B. Hall Hanlon, USN, has been named a representative of the Commander-in-Chief, United Nations Command, on the Combined Economic Board in Korea.

Maj. Gen. Thomas W. Herren, USA, Commanding General, Korea Communications Zone, previously held the post.

The Combined Economic Board was established 24 May 1952 by an economic coordination agreement between the Republic of Korea and the Unified Command. Admiral Hanlon's appointment to the Board is in addition to his other Korea Communications Zone duties.

Navy SurgGen Reports Lower Mortality Rate

The Surgeon General of the Navy, Rear Adm. Lamont Pugh, has reported a lower mortality rate in Korea, following a visit to the fighting front.

Admiral Pugh said the new bullet-resistant jackets have cut the mortality rate as compared to the rate of wounds. "I am certain there are many Marines who would be dead if they had not worn this jacket," Admiral Pugh said in a Pentagon press conference. He reported that many men "have not even become hors de combat as a result of wearing the new armor."

One incident observed by Admiral Pugh during his eight days in Korea (three of which were spent on the line with the Marines) was a Marine who had been hit by an "egg-size piece of shrapnel over the right breast." Although knocked down and badly bruised by the impact, he was able to return to the line. Admiral Pugh said, "This man, who would have been killed, I feel quite sure, had he not been wearing the new jacket, was not even knocked out of commission."

The Marines, he reported, have modified the jacket so as to afford greater protection for the abdomen and lower regions of the body. An extension in back goes further down over the hips and one in front makes the jacket resemble the breast protector of a baseball catcher.

Admiral Pugh also noted that less than 50 cases of frostbite were reported among Navy and Marine personnel for the 1951-52 winter season. The previous winter, a total of 3,017 cases of frostbite were reported. Admiral Pugh attributed the lowered rate of frostbite to the use of the new thermal boot, changes in combat conditions and constant education.

The Navy Surgeon General paid high tribute to members of the Medical profession serving in Korea. He said he was "amazed to see the type of traumatic surgery being done by young surgeons." He said they were operating with the skill of much older and more practiced men.

Admiral Pugh's trip took him on a world-wide inspection of Naval medical facilities. In addition to Korea, he visited Alaska, Japan, China, India, Burma, Pakistan, Iran, Saudi Arabia, Egypt, Turkey, Lebanon, Greece, Italy, French Morocco, France, Germany, Sweden, Denmark and the British Isles.

Typhoon Batters Wake; Navy Moves Residents

Aided by the Navy, the residents of Wake Island began moving to new quarters on other islands late this week after a devastating typhoon destroyed their homes and all but leveled the tiny Central Pacific atoll for which U. S. servicemen fought so courageously during World War II.

The typhoon, hitting a peak velocity of more than 160 miles an hour, roared across Wake last Monday, 15 Sept., uprooting trees and splintering all but four of the island's buildings. The entire population, numbering about 750, took refuge in underground shelters. Only four were injured, according to the Hawaiian Sea Frontier, and these were flown off the island by a Navy PBM Mariner which took them to Kwajalein. The plane had carried rations and blankets to the island's residents.

Transport planes carried food, water and tents to Wake, and a MSTs transport, the Ainsworth, was ordered to proceed to the atoll to help remove the residents. Those to be left behind will include about 200 essential workers who will be needed to restore order on the island.

Buildings still standing after the storm, which sent mountainous seas crashing across the island, included those in which President Truman and General MacArthur held their historic meeting in 1950. All of the temporary World War II structures were smashed by the wind and waves.

Complete School at Randolph

An 18-classroom school has been completed at Randolph AFB, Tex. It will accommodate 550 students.

Speed Rotation Request Presents Tough Problem

A House Armed Services Committee, which visited some 30 military installations in the Pacific and Alaska, has given high praise to the Armed Forces, but also has presented Pentagon officials with a tough problem.

The subcommittee's statement—the text is published herewith—calls for a speed-up in rotation of some troops, particularly from isolated posts.

While military officials certainly are cognizant of the effect on morale of extended overseas tours, economy factors in manpower and money would seem to prohibit any significant acceleration of rotation at this time.

The subcommittee has asked for an "immediate and careful study of certain inequities" in the matter of overseas tours. It can be expected, therefore, that the Department of Defense will make available to the Congressional group detailed data on the rotation problem.

The situation may be summed up pretty much in this fashion: Rotation can be accelerated, despite the obvious loss in combat efficiency. But this will mean that Congress must vote approval for additional manpower and funds.

Text of Statement

"The committee, in its inspection and investigation of some 30 military installations in the Pacific and Alaska, found an increasing amount of cost-consciousness in connection with the vast construction program in those areas.

"In Korea, Okinawa and Japan a noteworthy record is being made in the rebuilding and rehabilitation of worn and damaged material and equipment. More than a billion dollars has already been saved the taxpayers through that reclamation program.

"In Alaska, we found the cost of construction has been reduced substantially in some instances during the past year or two. Throughout the Pacific defense area other steps were discussed which should lead to more savings in the future.

"In Korea and the Far East, we were gratified to find the alleged shortages of ammunition are by no means as critical as have been rumored. The supply is considered entirely adequate to meet the tempo of the war and any foreseeable emergency that may arise. At the same time, considering the overall world picture, it is highly important that the production of certain types of ammunition be stepped up.

"The committee was greatly impressed with the caliber of our leadership in the Pacific and the Far East. Enough cannot be said for the gallantry, courage, and devotion of our fighting men in the performance of the duties assigned to them. All UN forces are fighting valiantly as a single team in the joint struggle against Communist aggression. Unification among our own services is really working out there.

"More and more ROK troops are making an ever-increasing contribution to the front line forces, where with training and equipment their fighting qualities are proving to be excellent.

"The tours of duty by servicemen, particularly in some of the more isolated posts, appear to the committee to be too long. In the interest of fairness and morale, the Department of Defense will be requested to make an immediate and careful study of certain inequities that came to our attention.

"Much of the information gathered by the committee was of a highly classified nature and, naturally, cannot be the subject of discussion. This will, however, provide useful background for the committee members in their future consideration of matters pertaining to our preparedness program."

the USSR, US, and British following in that order. In addition to the Austrian police, five colorful International patrols, each consisting of one military policeman from each of the four Powers, police the city. Inspections of the patrols rotate daily among officers of the four Powers.

Tactical Command

Tactical troops of U. S. Forces in Austria are commanded by a Headquarters appropriately named "Tactical Command." Tactical training in USFA begins on the squad and platoon level, working up to combined American and British or French maneuvers. Austria's topography is sufficiently varied to permit training of troops in all types of terrain.

Exercise REBOUND in the summer of 1951 taught Infantrymen of USFA how to operate in hot weather on terrain that is fairly level with some rolling hills. During Exercise MULE TRAIN in the French Zone of Austria last fall, USFA Infantrymen doubled as mountain troops. Exercise AVALANCHE, held this spring in the mountainous Arlberg area of Austria, gave USFA's ski troops a taste of rugged winter warfare in mountains as high as two miles with 20 feet of snow. USFA's artillerymen learned to get their big guns over almost impassable roads and dug-in, surrounded by walls of snow. Other combined French-American and British-American maneuvers instruct USFA's troops in the geographical details of Austria and Southern Germany. These joint maneuvers also give American men and officers practical experience in coordinating their actions with other Allied powers in Austria.

River Crossing Exercises

Other tactical training consists of problems and exercises similar to those taught the soldier in the United States. Because of the many mountain streams and rivers in Austria, river crossing exercises are an integral part of the USFA soldier's training. For unit firing exercises, up to company-level, USFA tactical troops practice fire and movement on the maneuvering area at Grafenwoehr, Germany.

Just as in the United States, training is a continuous process in Austria. Training on an individual basis is done by requiring a certain percentage of the command to attend schools, operated by USFA. The Tactical Command NCO Academy graduates a class of intensively-trained soldiers every eight weeks. USFA personnel also may take advantage of the high standard of teaching offered in various Army schools throughout the European Command. The USFA Troop Information and Education program presently is engaged in educating the soldier with courses designed to improve his skill in his military occupation.

Army Promotes 400

temporary promotions to Captain, the expectation is that the complete recommended list to major will be exhausted by the end of the year.

(Note: In some copies of last week's JOURNAL, an incorrect cut-off date was given for promotions to major. The correct date for last week's promotions was 15 Sept. 1946).

To Lieutenant Colonel—The promotions to lieutenant colonel, reported in last week's issue, extend through No. 79 on the recommended list, published on 13 Sept. The cut-off date for the 79 promotions last week was 17 Oct. 1945. There were a total of 1,358 majors on the recommended list to lieutenant colonel, according to an unofficial tabulation—1,307 on the Army Promotion List, 41 Judge Advocate General's Corps, 3 Chaplains, 3 Medical, 3 Dental, and 1 Veterinary Corps officer. Many of these officers undoubtedly will have to wait until 1953 before receiving promotions.

To Colonel—The complete eligibility list is published in this issue and contains 928 names, according to an unofficial count—899 Army Promotion List, 4 JAGC, 3 Chaplains, 7 Medical, 8 Dental, and 7 Medical Service Corps. Last week's issue reported the promotion of 41 of these officers. Not all of the lieutenant colonels on the recommended list to colonel will be promoted this year, according to present forecasts.

Named P.M.S.T. at Drexel

MICROWAVE

In 1931, International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation became the world pioneer—the first to beam man's voice through space by microwave. Today microwave has become the fastest growing communications system for spanning mountains, swamps, rivers and other natural barriers without costly wire lines—a system that is virtually immune to storm damage. And today IT&T is still the recognized leader, with its greatly advanced “pulse time multiplex” method of microwave transmission. If your company is planning to set up, expand or replace its own cross-country communication system, look first to PTM microwave. This versatile, flexible, new method provides for multiple speech channels, unattended telegraph, telemetering, remote control and other signaling. PTM microwave is available through Federal Telephone and Radio Corporation, an IT&T manufacturing associate.

IT&T engineers successfully demonstrate first voice transmission by microwave, Calais to Dover, March 31, 1931.

Integrate Doctors, Dentists

The Regular ranks of the Navy have been opened up to Reserve doctors and dentists now on active duty in both lieutenant grades.

Plans to integrate the Reserve Medical and Dental Corps officers were disclosed this week by Rear Adm. J. F. Bolger, Deputy Chief of Naval Personnel, who said that applications are desired from both lieutenants and lieutenants (jg) of the two Corps, now on active duty, who have not reached their 37th birthday.

The Navy told THE JOURNAL it would accept "as many doctors in this category as it can get," and that an initial group of approximately 75-80 dentists will be integrated under the program, if the number of applicants is large enough.

The grade of the appointment will be determined, the Navy said, by "age and professional experience of the applicant." Normally, the grade will be the same as that held in the Naval Reserve, but will not necessarily be with the same precedence and date of rank.

To make application, interested officers should submit letter requests for consideration to the Chief of Naval Personnel (Pers-B6221), via their commanding officers. Documents which should accompany the request include a Special Fitness Report (NavPers 310) and Report of Physical Examination by a Board of Medical Examiners.

At the same time it was announced that the Navy will approve extensions "for a period of one month or more" for all Medical and Dental Corps Officers who are eligible for release during the period 1 Oct. 1952 to 31 Jan. 1953, inclusive, "provided no change of station is involved."

The latter move was made, the Navy said, "to reduce the anticipated critical shortage of medical and dental officers during the second and third quarters of fiscal year 1953." Interested officers may apply to BuPers for extensions "even though release to inactive-duty orders have been received."

Liaison Squadrons to Serve As Tactical Command Links

Plans for the activation of nine Liaison Squadrons, each equipped with 15 L-20 fixed wing aircraft and 10 H-19 helicopters, are reported by General John K. Cannon, USAF, Commanding General, Tactical Air Command, Langley AFB, Va.

The squadrons will serve as an air-link between headquarters and units in the field and will also perform communications and supply functions.

The overall plan of the liaison program as announced by General Cannon is for a total of nine squadrons to be activated, trained and equipped by TAC during the next two years. Of these nine squadrons, two will remain in the United States for assignment to the 9th and 18th Air Forces. The others will be deployed overseas.

At present three liaison units, the 2d, 3d, and 4th Squadrons, are undergoing operational training under TAC's 9th and 18th Air Forces. Three additional squadrons, the 5th, 6th and 7th, are scheduled for activation by November 1952.

All three squadrons now in training are using the L-20 Beaver, a single engine liaison airplane built by the DeHavilland Co. in Canada. Equipped with a 450 H.P. Pratt-Whitney engine, the L-20 has a top speed of 180 miles an hour and a maximum range of over 500 miles. The Beaver is designed to carry as many as six passengers or accommodate four litters and a medical attendant. When used for supply missions, the L-20 has a 1000-pound payload capacity and has a service ceiling of over 20,000 feet and a combat radius of 215 miles.

Part of the mission of these light-weight airplanes will be the transportation of personnel between headquarters units and the field. In addition, they may be used to maintain contact with Army units working with Tactical Air Command elements. The liaison squadrons will also carry supplies and equipment for small TAC units operating in the field and will maintain command contact between these units and their headquarters.

The liaison units will also be responsible for conducting aero-medical evacuation in the combat zone and elsewhere as required to supplement the aero-medical evacuation system.

Observer Tng. for Majors

The Strategic Air Command has been told that it may enter navigators and bombardiers in grade of major in the Basic Observer Course, #150001.

This course leads to award of AFSC 1524—Aircraft Observer, Navigator-Bombardier. Officers in this category, the Air Force said, will be limited to a maximum of 10 per cent of the total input of 48 every two weeks.

SAC has been asked to insure that the additional training will benefit the Air Force and that upon graduation assignment will be to a position requiring an observer rating.

U. S. AIR FORCE

Jet Tng. at Connally

Jet fighter pilot training soon will join aerial observer training as a function of James Connally AFB, Tex., with the first class of jet students slated to arrive 3 Nov.

Brig. Gen. Gabriel P. Disosway, USAF, FlyTAF commanding general, told Central Texas newsmen of the change at a press conference at FlyTAF headquarters in Waco, Tex., this week.

Connally AFB will make room for the jet school by transferring two of its three aerial observer courses to Sheppard AFB in Wichita Falls, Tex., which is in the Technical Training Air Force (TechTAF) command.

TechTAF is another component of Air Training Command. Although the two aerial observer courses will be conducted on the TechTAF base, they still will be under jurisdiction of FlyTAF.

The one observer course remaining at James Connally will be radar-intercept training. When the phase-in of the jet students is complete in May 1953 there will be approximately 270 radar-intercept students and 470 jet pilot trainees.

James Connally will be FlyTAF's seventh jet school, its fourth in Texas. Others are Bryan AFB, Laredo AFB, Webb AFB at Big Spring, Williams AFB in Arizona and Craig AFB, Ala. Craig AFB is a jet pilot instructor school.

Jet training is divided into two phases. In the first phase students fly conventional type T-28 trainers. In the second phase they fly T-33 jets. Each phase lasts approximately 12 weeks.

FlyTAF in some cases has conducted phase-one training at three other Texas bases, San Marcos AFB, Perrin AFB at Sherman, and Goodfellow AFB at San Angelo.

When James Connally begins its new program 3 Nov. only phase-two students will be in training. The first class will have 64 trainees. Classes of 116 students will arrive every six weeks thereafter and two complete classes will be in training at all times.

Phase-one training will not come to James Connally until May 1953.

The two James Connally aerial observer courses which will move to Sheppard AFB are bombardier refresher and radar-observer-bombardier training.

James Connally has been training aerial observers since July 1951. Before that it was a primary pilot training base, providing the first training pilots receive before entering the more advanced jet or multi-engine training.

Synthetic Fabrics

The Air Force has approved for use in optional summer uniforms two synthetic textiles—50% Wool-50% Dacron, Tropical Worsted Weave; and 50% Dacron-50% Viscose Rayon, Tropical Worsted Weave.

Tests indicate that these two materials maintain a good appearance for a longer period of time than present wool fabrics, Air Force officials said.

Uniforms of these synthetic fabrics in shade 193 are being approved for optional wear in addition to the present standard wool textiles.

'Copter Sprays Good-Will

The Air Force has dispatched a spray-equipped H-5 helicopter to Honduras to aid the Central American country in its fight against the locust. Tactical Air Command's Eighteenth Air Force and the Air Proving Ground Command joined forces to provide the men and equipment for the airlift and the 30-day spraying operation.

The helicopter, furnished by the Air Proving Ground Command, was flown from Eglin AFB, Fla., to Albrook AFB in the Canal Zone in a C-119 type aircraft from the 435th Troop Carrier Wing based in Miami. The final destination for the helicopter was Tegucigalpa, Honduras.

The spray aircraft, its pilot 1st Lt. Stanley H. Sheley, and a three-man maintenance crew headed by Capt. Joseph D. Cooper, were picked up by a C-119 piloted by Maj. R. W. Taylor.

Assumes FlyTAF Command

Brig. Gen. Gabriel P. Disosway has assumed command of Flying Training Air Force at Waco, Tex.

FlyTAF is the Air Training Command component which provides the first instruction for the Air Force's pilots, navigators, bombardiers and observers at 26 bases from Florida to California.

General Disosway comes to Waco from a post as director of training in the office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel at Air Force headquarters in Washington.

Former FlyTAF chief executive was Maj. Gen. Warren R. Carter who left the position 10 Aug. to become commander of NATO's Allied Air Forces North with headquarters in Oslo, Norway.

General Carter established FlyTAF in Waco 1 May 1951 when rapid expansion of the Air Force required decentralization of Air Training Command into training air forces.

ARDC Scientist Named

Dr. Amos G. Horney of the Air Research and Development Command's Office of Scientific Research at Baltimore, Md., has received an appointment as Air Force member of the National Research Council's Chemistry and Chemical Technology Division.

Dr. Horney, chief of the Office of Scientific Research' Chemistry Division, succeeds Brig. Gen. Edward P. Mechling, Commanding General of ARDC's Air Force Armament Center, Eglin AFB, Fla., whose three-year term expired recently. Dr. Horney's term will expire 30 June, 1955.

AFROTC Grads Enter Course

Forty-two June AFROTC graduates are among the 160 officers enrolled in the USAF Institute of Technology Resident College at Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio.

AFROTC graduates were allowed for the first time to enter the Resident College directly from their college campuses under a recent amendment to Air Force Regulation 53-11, which removed the eligibility requirement of one year's active commissioned service.

No More Inflammables

The Air Force is eliminating use of the words "inflammable" and "inflammability." Instead, "flammable" and "non-flammable" will be used. The nomenclature change was recently established by the Interstate Commerce Commission and the National Fire Protection Association.

1954, will be considered for promotion under the "fully qualified" method.

Permanent grade Captains of the Nurses' Promotion List with date of rank prior to 20 Jan. 1943 will be considered, under the "best qualified" method of selection, for promotion to permanent major.

Failure to be selected for promotion of WAF and Nurse officers to Lieutenant Colonel and of Nurse officers to major will not be considered as "passovers." Officers to be considered who desire to submit a written communication should forward it direct to the Director of Military Personnel, Hq., USAF, Washington 25, D. C. The communication must arrive at Headquarters, USAF, prior to 17 Nov. 1952.

Mrs. Rosenberg's Statement

the cost of living after 1949. It was this generally approved recommendation that prompted the Defense Department to propose a ten-per cent across-the-board increase last year to compensate for the increase in the cost of living since 1949.

"The increases granted by the Congress this past May averaged less than six per cent and, thus, our men and women in uniform were unable to meet the rising cost of living. Further, this cost has continued upward and is now almost three per cent higher than last year—making a total rise since 1949 of over twelve per cent.

"Unless the cost of living sharply and substantially declines before 1 January 1953, the Department of Defense plans to propose to the President an adjustment in service pay and allowances early in the next Congress in order to reflect the difference in the amount that the cost of living has increased since 1949 over and above the pay adjustment granted last year.

"The entire problem is under careful and intensive study in the Office of the Secretary of Defense with a view towards developing a legislative proposal in accordance with this policy.

"At the time the last increase was granted members of the Armed Forces, I said that it was a step in the right direction but that the increase was insufficient to give members of the Armed Forces comparable treatment with that being accorded civilian employees of the Government and of the civilian economy.

"The men and women who serve our country in uniform give sacrifices which can never be compensated for in dollars-and-cents terms. But our inability to fully express the country's gratitude for their devotion and service should not be permitted to stand in the way of our providing them equitable and reasonable monetary payment for their efforts. This will not only boost their morale but will enable them to make more adequate provision for the health and comfort of their families and loved ones."

U. S. Coast Guard

THE Coast Guard announced on 18 Sept. that one of its heavy-duty icebreakers, the CGC Eastwind, operating with the U. S. Navy, Royal Canadian Navy and Canadian Department of Transport had completed its assignment with the 1952 NANOOK operation to re-supply the isolated Arctic icebound joint American and Canadian weather stations.

Working under the Task Group Commander, Capt. J. W. Callahan, USN, Commander Service Squadron FOUR, the operation marks the sixth consecutive year the American Navy ships have undertaken this important supply project and the fifth year in which a Coast Guard icebreaker has participated.

Such missions are the only major means of replenishing these desolate bases which provide vital information for Arctic research and weather data as well as valuable scientific and geographic material for study by the U. S. and Canada.

This year while en route from the operations base at Thule, Greenland, to supply Alert, the northernmost weather station in the world, located on the northeast tip of Ellesmere Island in the Canadian Northwest Territories on Dumbell Bay, the CGC Eastwind, under the command of Capt. O. A. Peterson, USCG, met with Arctic ice up to 10 feet in thickness as it worked its way between and around the floes of solid ice having diameters up to 10 miles and crisscrossed with pressure ridges up to 50 feet in height. So difficult was this passage that three days were spent to cover 120 miles of travel.

Tons of supplies and equipment were transferred ashore at Alert in a little over 18 hours as the ship's crew and weather station personnel raced to take advantage of the short Arctic summer season threatening to close all passages back to Thule.

It was during the return to Thule that the EASTWIND through intervention of great ice packs reached what is believed to be the northernmost point ever touched by a ship under its own power, or to 82 degrees latitude, 38 minutes, 20 seconds. This is within 442 nautical, or 508 statute miles of the North Pole. Thus the Eastwind exceeded her own previous record established during the first supply mission for Alert in the summer of Service Pay. That there is a state of awareness in the upper and "action" areas of the Department of Defense concerning the problem of Service pay was amply demonstrated this week by the prompt and ready reply of Secretary Lovett to the inquiry on that subject made by a JOURNAL reporter. Mr. Lovett said that the problem has been under study and that the results so far have demonstrated the necessity for a further upward revision of Service pay scales to meet the risen cost of living.

The study the Secretary referred to is a carrying forward of the informal survey Assistant Secretary Anna M. Rosenberg ordered before she went to Europe this Summer. Her trip abroad confirmed her prior fears and upon her return in the middle of August, Mrs. Rosenberg stated publicly that while last Spring's increase had a good effect on morale it was not adequate to meet the increased cost of living and that she hoped the next Congress would "complete the adjustment."

The heartening aspect of this week's development is that it shows the Secretary himself has also been close to the developments in the problem and that he feels further action is necessary to bring Service pay more nearly into line with the already more substantially increased pay scales in business and industry, as well as in the civilian ranks of the Government.

A reopening of the matter in Congress would also afford an opportunity to give better treatment to the retired officers and enlisted personnel who were almost left out of the last increase. Those on the retired list, most of whom get considerably less than 50 per cent of their former active duty pay, were allowed only a four per cent increase last Spring. Because they have been shorn of all allowances, they did not share in the 14 per cent increase in rental and subsistence given to those on active duty.

The national elections should have no bearing on the outlook for Service pay. It will be recalled that last Spring there was support, and also opposition, to the increase in both major parties. The important first step is to have definite and adequate recommendations for legislation put before Congress by the responsible heads of the Department of Defense. It looks now as though this will be done.

Today's Defense. In a statement in Paris this week General of the Army Omar N. Bradley, Chairman of the United States Joint Chiefs of Staff, gave a timely warning that development of atomic weapons is not sufficiently advanced to warrant any let-down in efforts to increase the strength of ground forces of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. It is always tempting to speculate that there may be a short cut to security, and that new discoveries may provide a way to lighten the heavy burden of armament costs. Recent discussions of the progress of research in the field of atomic warfare, as the general points out, "has led to wishful thinking" among western European nations, where the hope has been expressed that present military goals of the countries associated in the defense against aggression might be revised downward. Such views, the general declares, could be misleading and dangerous.

Certainly future capabilities of atomic weapons can be regarded with optimism, but a realistic approach demands consideration of the fact that their mass production and tactical employment is still largely in the realm of informed speculation. The time lag between conception and availability is unfortunately sure to be quite long. Danger of Communist aggression is a present one, and the free world must be prepared to meet it with forces equipped with conventional arms and equipment now available, not with something that may be secured at some time in the indefinite future. While it is true that it is a great hazard to try to win a war today with yesterday's weapons, it is absolutely certain that we cannot fight today's battles with tomorrow's arms.

Even under the most favorable circumstances, with ample supplies of atomic bombs and weapons available, General Bradley states, "there will always be the need for sufficient ground troops to force the enemy to concentrate for an attack." If that were not the case, a wide employment of individual soldiers, he says, would permit an advance "in the face of the greatest atomic power on earth," unless men are on the scene to stop it.

In these days when there is much glib speculation of the effect of guided missiles with atomic warheads, atomic artillery, and other features of so-called push-button warfare, it is good to be brought back to earth by this caution of a seasoned veteran of many hard fought campaigns. The era of atomic weapons is certainly approaching, but the mission of the well-trained ground soldier is far from ended.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—

Simultaneous announcement by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill last week of important military conferences held in London in July and participated in by the highest military and naval figures of both countries has heightened the belief that plans for the much discussed "second front" have been formulated and are now only awaiting execution. Discussion still continued as to the identity of the man who would lead this operation—undoubtedly to be one of the greatest and most involved in history.

50 Years Ago—

We are informed that the Secretary of the Navy will not ask Congress for additional ships during the coming session, but will confine his recommendations for adding to the navy's strength to an urgent presentation of the need for an increase in the number of officers commensurate with the growth in ships. It is also stated that the leading members of the House and Senate Committees on Naval Affairs have favored a limitation of the appropriations for construction of ships to each alternate session of Congress.

85 Years Ago—

Two dispatches have lately come through the Atlantic cable on the subject of the alleged American negotiations regarding the purchase from Denmark of her West India colonies. In the first place, a Copenhagen telegram tells us that the journals of Denmark are discussing the reported proposition of the United States for the purchase of the island of St. Thomas. They generally favor the project, and urge the Danish Government to enter into negotiations with the American Government for the sale of the island.

Penalizing Youth

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Is the Organized Reserve Corps merely giving lip service to the theory that the "best qualified" officers should get the promotions, or is it really interested in advancing officers with active duty and professional experience to key Reserve positions?

In the regulation governing promotion of reserve officers (SR 140-155-1, par. 7b), one year of active duty is considered acceptable as the training requirement for promotion to the next higher rank, provided the efficiency rating for the year is acceptable. That looks good to the Category IV-17 officer who is finishing up his tour and returning to USAR status.

At the conclusion of my 17 months I will have served in a Lieutenant Colonel vacancy for 15 months, yet my chances of promotion in the Active Reserve are nil because I am a couple of years short of the minimum age-34 requirement set out in the above cited regulation. There must be hundreds of others like me.

Paradoxically, I could be promoted to Lieutenant Colonel while on active duty at the age of 32, provided I met efficiency and other requirements; however, when I return to USAR status, I'll have two years to wait before I can even be considered.

Does it figure that reservists can perform the duties of the next higher rank while on active duty, only to return to the USAR and find they are ineligible for promotion because they are too young? The Regular Army imposes no such age restriction, though age, admittedly, does have some bearing on Regular Army promotion. Not only does the reserve promotion regulation establish minimum age requirements, but also it specifically slams the door on minimum age waivers, except for promotion to 1st Lieutenant.

The effect on young reservists who are willing to work hard for promotion is certainly not salutary when they find that they are being penalized for being born too late and performing well enough to have been promoted in the past.

It is understandable that neither the Regular Army nor the Officers' Reserve Corps wants its field grade officers to be callow, inexperienced youths, but what about the younger officers who have proved they can handle the duties of the next higher grade while serving actively?

"YOUNG MAJOR"

"Forgotten Lot"

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I am a Regular Army officer's widow. The question I want answered is, "are we among the forgotten lot?"

Our husbands of the Regular Army were just as good soldiers as the Reserves, yet the Reserve widows receive so much more compensation than the Regular widows. It is as hard for us to struggle to exist in these hard times of the high cost of living, rent, etc. as Reserve widows—many times harder for many Reserves had years in civilian life in which to build up their business which many of their wives could carry on.

I am sure those at the Pentagon can appreciate our position and can get behind this and fight for the Regular soldier's widow. Why should so great a difference be made after a man's death?

ONE OF MANY FORGOTTEN WIDOWS.

Promotion Comparison

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Your article entitled "AF Maps Plans for Temporary Promotions" on Page One of your 6 Sept. 1952 issue, in which it states "the Davis Amendment . . . hits the Air Force hardest of all the Services" has given rise in the mind of the writer to some puzzling reflections, followed by a bit of statistical research.

Reference to the current issue of the Army Register indicates that of the 129 members of my class (USMA 1929) presently on active duty and never passed over by a Selection Board, a total of 8, or 6.2%, are serving as General Officers. Similar reference to the Air Force Register shows 32 "never-passed-over" classmates, of which 16, or exactly 50%, are serving as Generals.

Somehow, I doubt you could convince my classmates in brown uniforms that our Air Force members are suffering any particular hardships promotion-wise from the Davis Amendment—or from any other source.

SLIGHTLY CYNICAL

The career of every officer in the Marine Corps, from the time of his original entry into the service until the time of his final separation, is intimately bound up with a small folder at Marine Corps Headquarters—his "official record."

The contents of this folder tell many things about the officer—what kind of man he is, what kind of officer, what he looks like, how he acts, what his good and bad points are, what kind of training he has had, when he has been promoted or failed to be promoted. The multitudinous documents which make up this folder reflect his complete military history, as well as much that happened to him even before he entered the service.

Two Distinct Records

Actually, two distinct records make up every Marine officer's "official record." One is called a "Correspondence Jacket," and the other a "Selection Board Jacket."

The Correspondence Jacket, while an important part of the entire file, is the least significant of the two. It contains mostly official orders of various types. HQMC orders covering transfers, temporary duty assignments, changes of station, and so forth, as well as orders to or from extended active duty, retirement and separation, or orders transferring the officer from one hospital to another.

Correspondence in the file includes basic forms, documents and correspondence relative to original commissioning; birth certificate; college credits or certificate of graduation; reports of medical examination; allotment notices; uniform gratuity forms; final security clearance, and other administrative papers.

Promotion Jacket

The Selection Board Jacket is by far the more important of the two jackets, for it determines in large measure the military promotion path which the officer will follow. Material contained in this jacket covers every facet of the officer's career and is carefully combed by selection boards considering him for advancement.

The importance of this jacket to the career of a Marine officer has been stressed by a Headquarters directive which states that each individual piece of material filed in the jacket must "be approved by the Director of Personnel, Marine Corps, or a person specifically designated by him in writing." Not only does this official indicate the appropriate section of the selection board jacket in which the material is to be filed, but he initials the material to signify that it has been cleared for filing.

Included in this jacket are four types of material. One consists solely of certificates and other miscellaneous matter; another embraces all favorable matter about the officer; a third includes only unfavorable matter, and the fourth section contains fitness reports on the officer.

Under the certificates and miscellaneous category fall all certificates, diplomas and over evidence of completion of courses of instruction which the officer has received during his service in the Marine Corps. It includes also all requests for change of orders for personal reasons and the final action taken on such requests; all requests for special duty or training, or retention on extended active duty beyond the officer's normal release date, when such requests have been disapproved or filed awaiting action.

Resignations or applications for retirement, including those which are subsequently withdrawn, are filed in this section, as are reserve retirement credit reports, and even official routing sheets attached to any of the matter listed here. In addition, this section contains a current official photograph of the officer and all correspondence which is neither clearly favorable nor unfavorable in nature, but which would be of interest to a selection board.

Not included are such things as certificates, diplomas and other evidence of completion of courses of instruction received prior to the officer's entry in the Marine Corps.

Favorable Matter

The second section of this jacket contains matter which is favorable to the officer: citations and awards which he has received; recommendations for citations and awards; letters of commendation; favorable comments in forwarding endorsements on special requests; letters regarding inspections containing favorable comments which reflect credit on the officer individually. Also, letters of appreciation for services rendered from civilian sources, as well as other favorable matter not specifically listed here.

Excluded from this part of the jacket is any matter which does not in itself actually reflect credit on the officer, such as letters of transmittal on awards and decorations that add nothing to the award, applications for area-theater ribbons, requests for replacement of lost or destroyed medals or ribbons, and recommendations made by the officer concerned for awards for other officers.

Unfavorable Matter

Perhaps the most important section of the jacket is that reserved for unfavorable matter, for this section reaches down into the private life of the officer. It covers not only his military conduct, but his conduct in off-duty hours, whether in or out of uniform. Even if the "favorable" section is heavily weighted, one black mark here, if it carries enough

Reds Retain Hold on Port Arthur

AT the conclusion of a month of negotiations the Soviet Union and Red China this week announced agreement on prolonging Russia's lease on Port Arthur until the two countries sign peace treaties with Japan. Under the new agreement Russia will turn over full administration of the Changchun railway in Manchuria to China by the end of the year.

Under the treaty of alliance of 1950 Russia had agreed to return Port Arthur and the railway to Red China not later than the end of 1952. The arrangement just concluded means that Russia will retain Port Arthur indefinitely, since a peace treaty with Japan in the foreseeable future seems very unlikely. Nominally the Port Arthur naval base is under joint control of the two Red allies, but actually Russia appears to be in complete control. In the communique signed by Prime Minister Chou En-Lai for the Chinese Communists and Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinski for Russia it is stated that Russia agreed to remain in Port Arthur at the request of the Chinese Reds, who profess to fear that in the absence of a peace treaty they may again be the object of Japanese aggression.

In addition to the references to Port Arthur and the Changchun Railroad it is stated in the communique that political and economic questions affecting both countries had been discussed at the Moscow conference. Surface indications point to a major diplomatic defeat for Red China at the hands of her Russian ally. She modifies the existing treaty to the great advantage of her Soviet masters, and apparently receives no recompense in return. This is not an unusual experience of puppet states in dealing with the Kremlin. The effort to make it appear that Red China requested Russia to stay in Port Arthur is a transparent face-saving ruse.

However, we may be quite sure that there were secret conclusions reached which will not be given immediate publicity. The conference began on 18 August, and it is difficult to believe that it took a month to arrange for the return of the Changchun railroad and the extension of the Russian hold on Port Arthur. Certainly the discussions among the Russian leaders and the members of the large Chinese staff of diplomatic, military, and economic specialists were largely, probably primarily, concerned with the Korean War, further Russian military and economic aid to China, and the political situation in Southeast Asia and other sections of the Far East. Decisions on these matters may become known through subsequent developments, perhaps at the Panmunjom armistice conference, or at the meeting of the General Assembly of the United Nations next month. A wholly unconfirmed dispatch from Formosa reports that as a part of the Moscow bargain the Chinese Communists will receive extensive military aid from Russia, including some 1,500 more MIG jet planes. Indications are that this is a conjecture, based on logic rather than verified information.

KOREAN TRUCE NEGOTIATIONS at Panmunjom continue to mark time, with the conference in recess nearly all week. Communist delegates, however, continued to protest what was termed inhuman treatment of Red prisoners held by the Allies. Red radio propaganda broadcasts also stressed Allied mistreatment of war prisoners, and revived the discredited issue of germ warfare, by quoting a report of Communist scientists from various countries, renewing the charge that American flyers had attempted to start epidemics by dropping infected insects behind the lines.

Two new Russian envoys arrived in the United States this week with messages of "peace and collaboration." Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Valerian A. Zorin came to take over as representative to the United Nations, succeeding Jacob A. Malik, while Georgi N. Zarubin is the new Russian ambassador to Washington. Mr. Zorin, a former ambassador to Czechoslovakia, is generally believed to have directed the coup that made that country a satellite of Russia. On his arrival in New York he assured the press that the Soviet Union would follow "a policy of peace and collaboration with all countries," while Mr. Zarubin said his aim would be to strengthen co-operation of the United States and Russia.

THE IRANIAN PARLIAMENT this week gave Prime Minister Mohammed Mossadegh a unanimous vote of confidence, after he had reported on his rejection of the Truman-Churchill compromise designed to settle the dispute with Great Britain over the seizure of British oil properties. He threatened to break diplomatic relations with Britain if new Iranian demands were not met. While he reversed a previous decision and agreed to let the World Court fix compensation for the expropriated British property, he rejected in advance any claim that Britain might make for potential revenue lost by the seizure. The aging premier demanded increased royalty payments for oil delivered over a period of years, basing the claim on terms of a proposed contract rejected by the Iranian parliament. He also demanded that the British compensate his country for damages caused by the shutdown of the oil industry, after he had seized it.

The action of the premier and his subservient parliament apparently ends any immediate hope of resolving the controversy. However, some devious path to an agreement may still be open, as the old premier seems to prefer the indirect approach, and cunningly appears to be awaiting a better offer than the one he so noisily rejected. An early settlement is imperative if Iran is to be saved from bankruptcy, which seems inevitable unless the lucrative revenue from oil royalties is restored. In order to frighten the western powers some of Mossadegh's followers are openly flirting with Communism.

Mr. W. Alton Jones, head of Cities Service Company, an American oil corporation, is still in Iran, and may figure in possible future negotiations for resumption of oil production. Hjalmar Schacht, German economist, who was called to Iran as financial adviser to Mossadegh, bluntly informed him that the Iranians were lazy, and would have to work harder to get on their feet. He added that Iran should increase productive labor, and encourage private enterprise, establishing insurance and banking companies and co-operatives, and getting rid of government monopolies. He returned to Germany to prepare a plan for the financial recovery of Iran.

THE ALL-INDIA CONGRESS COMMITTEE, highest policy-making body of the governing party of India, appealed to the great powers this week to meet in a spirit of friendliness and mutual trust to discuss questions threatening world peace. The resolution was drafted by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru, and unanimously adopted by the committee. There was sharp criticism by the committee of the non-recognition of Red China by the United States. Contrary to previous reports the Indian government decided that the Indian Army Ambulance unit serving with United Nations Forces in Korea would remain there until there is a more definite indication of the results of the Panmunjom truce conference.

Press Comment of Service Interest

Cleveland Plain Dealer—The Army has announced that its new distinctive uniform items for infantrymen "will 'enhance the prestige' of the infantry soldier and identify the combat-ready infantry units of the active Army." But here we beg to differ with the Army. Scarves and shoulder cords will do very little to 'enhance the prestige' of these brave sons of ours. They have already earned their prestige with feats of endurance and valor. They have earned their prestige with their blood. Let us say, rather, that the scarves and shoulder cords will add to the attractiveness of the infantry uniform, which is all to the good."

Columnist Stewart Alsop—"our waning retaliatory air striking power must be restored . . . the existing, almost universal complacency about our retaliatory striking power threatens to become a total illusion. Maybe, as the air planners assert, we can still do a lot of damage today, but the power we have now is a rapidly wasting asset."

Washington Post—"The Senate Preparedness Subcommittee has cried 'wolf!' so often that it is difficult to give great credence to its new criticism of lagging aircraft procurement . . . Senator Lyndon Johnson, chairman of the subcommittee, terms the major fault 'a capacity for indecision which at times has reached amazing levels.' We wonder, however, whether what he describes as 'indecision' is not really a refusal of the Defense Department to be pressured by the subcommittee into rash action."

Atlanta Constitution—The new armored vests seem to be proving their worth. "Green troops, they say, object to the equipment as 'heavy, bulky and hot.' But the attitude of the seasoned trooper is reflected by the case of the soldier who put on three vests, two around his middle and one on his head. Then he got hit in the arm."

Arkansas Democrat—"Operation Mecca (the Air Force removal of pilgrims stranded at Beirut on their way to Mecca) has accomplished what millions of pamphlets and thousands of radio broadcasts could not. If this be propaganda, let us have more of such deeds. By them we shall be judged."

Oregon Statesman—Justice William O. Douglas has "offered some encouragement for our side of the 'cold war' after his trip through Southeast Asia." He "emphasized the need of fostering movements for reform as an antidote for communism rather than to rely wholly on military efforts."

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

New Eighth Army Commander—Unless there is an unexpected change in Army policy, the Pentagon soon will name a successor for General James A. Van Fleet, Commanding General of the Eighth Army in Korea.

General Van Fleet, who has held the top post in the Eighth Army since April 1951, is slated for mandatory retirement on 31 Jan. 1953.

Although he will not reach the statutory retirement age of 62 until 19 March 1954, General Van Fleet will have over 35 years total service and five years in the permanent grade of major general this coming January. This means retirement.

Under provisions of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947, a permanent major general with 35 years service (actually General Van Fleet had 37 years active duty as of 12 June 1952) and five years in permanent two-star grade (he was made a permanent major general on 24 Jan. 1948) must retire.

Exceptions are possible and General Van Fleet could be retained in his present assignment beyond his scheduled retirement date. But it is more likely he will be retired and a new Eighth Army commander named.

The Army has followed a practice throughout the fighting in Korea to give command experience to as many general officers as possible. Changes of command, even at the corps level, have been frequent. In addition to giving battlefield command experience to scores of general officers, this policy has vitalized training in the United States.

The chances are that if General Van Fleet were not facing retirement early next year, he would have been "rotated" previously, since he has held this demanding combat assignment 17 months. Now, there seems little doubt that he will be given another assignment prior to retirement.

At the Pentagon, there is, of course, official silence on the matter of the Eighth Army command, particularly in view of the fact that General Van Fleet has troops of many nations under his command.

General Van Fleet is not the only senior Army officer who soon will be completing his active military service. Lt. Gen. Lewis A. Pick, Chief of Engineers, will reach the statutory retirement age of 62 in November, and the next month Lt. Gen. Willis D. Crittenger, First Army commander, will retire for the same reason, as will Lt. Gen. Thomas B. Larkin, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-4, Logistics, who will be succeeded by Lt. Gen. Williston B. Palmer.

In January, in addition to General Van Fleet, Lt. Gen. Manton S. Eddy, now Commander-in-Chief, U. S. Army in Europe; and Lt. Gen. Edward M. Almond, former Corps commander in Korea and now Commandant of the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., also will retire upon completion of 35 years' service and five years as a permanent major general.

The Army policy is not to retain officers who reach the age of 60 and have the 35 years' service and 5 years in permanent grade. Other officers who will have 35 and 5 in January 1953 will be kept on duty until they reach the age of 60.

In addition to Generals Van Fleet, Eddy and Almond, a number of major generals will be retired in January upon completing 35 years' service and 5 years in permanent grade.

Study Combat Pay Inequities—Inequities of the combat pay bill—graphically illustrated this week by an explosion aboard a Navy ship in Korean waters—are under study by the Defense Department, and Congress may be asked to re-write the legislation when it reconvenes early next year. Some Service personnel have complained bitterly about the legislation, arguing that it is too discriminatory in its application. This week's accident illustrates one of the weaker elements of the bill.

The Navy destroyer USS Barton, while operating off the coast of Korea on 15 Sept., struck an enemy mine which tore a five-foot hole in the forward fire room and injured seven men. Five other men were reported missing in action.

The Navy confirmed the fact that all seven of the injured men will receive combat pay, as will survivors of the missing men, but the remaining 300-odd members of the Barton crew will not receive the higher pay rate.

The Barton is the eleventh Naval vessel to suffer mine casualties, and the 68th ship to be either damaged or sunk off Korea. However, personnel aboard Navy ships do not receive combat pay unless their ship is under direct enemy fire for at least six days out of a calendar month, or unless they are injured or killed. The legislation states specifically that vessels must be subjected to hostile fire or explosion and that "exposure to the threat" of either is not sufficient.

Ground personnel also complain. Those in echelons higher than regiment are not eligible for the pay even if their command post is overrun by the enemy and they have to spend a month fighting their way out.

These two problems, and numerous others posed by the provisions of the combat pay bill, are being studied carefully by the Services and it is expected they will recommend changes in the bill to a new Defense Department committee expected to be announced this week-end or early next week.

The new committee will study all aspects of both hazardous duty pay and incentive pay. Preliminary work has already been conducted by a team of five officers, headed by Brig. Gen. John S. Dabney, USA, in the Office of Assistant Secretary of Defense Anna M. Rosenberg.

The officers who are compiling preliminary data are Col. J. H. Mangan, USAF, Col. J. M. Masters, USMC, Capt. B. S. Custer, USN, and Maj. R. D. Pearsall, USA. A fifth officer, Comdr. A. W. Bright, USN, a Naval Aviator, has acted as part-time consultant to the group.

"Buddy" Replacement Units—The Army is experimenting with the use of four-man "buddy" units organized into carrier companies for shipment overseas as replacements. The first such company left Ft. Dix, N. J., for Europe this week. Two more carrier companies are now in training at Ft. Dix.

Assignments in Europe will depend, of course, upon requirements, but the Army hopes that a large number of groups will not be split up.

The organization of carrier companies is expected to boost morale of young soldiers who often feel a sense of "aloneness" and "not belonging" when sent overseas as individual replacements. The new system is expected also to save money by speeding and simplifying pre-shipment processing.

Upon arrival overseas, the company will be discontinued, but many of its personnel will continue to serve with men whom they have known since entering the Army.

Conference in Denver.***It's believed, however, that rebuttal by Pentagon experts will include statistics to show that Guardsmen have received FAIR SHARE of advancements. At its recent convention, the Reserve Officers Assn. generally endorsed current promotion policies.

...The Denver sessions next month also will doubtless see some Natl Guard leaders advocate legislation to set up a type of UMT PROGRAM in Guard units.***Meantime, there is as yet no indication from the Pentagon of UMT proposals for the new Congress. The POLITICAL RAMIFICATIONS are such that little, or nothing, will be said on this subject until after the elections.

High-Powered AF Inquiry—General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, USAF Chief of Staff, has named a star-studded Board of Inquiry to review the circumstances of the 1 Sept. storm which struck Carswell AFB, Tex., demolishing one B-36 and damaging 71 others in varying degrees. Repair costs, including reconstruction of damaged base facilities, is estimated at $48,000,000.

Details of the damage were made public following a report made to General Vandenberg by an investigating team, which was headed by Lt. Gen. Bryant L. Boatner, Air Force Inspector General. Other members were Maj. Gen. Roger M. Ramey, Air Force Director of Operations, and Maj. Gen. William O. Senter, Commanding General of the Air Weather Service.

The Board of Inquiry is headed by General Nathan F. Twining, Air Force Vice Chief of Staff. Its other members are Lt. Gen. Laurence S. Kuter, DCS, Personnel; Lt. Gen. Thomas D. White, DCS, Operations; Lt. Gen. Orval R. Cook, DCS, Materiel; Lt. Gen. Laurence C. Craigie, DCS, Development, and General Boatner, the I.G.

The Board is "to determine, first, whether responsibility, if any is involved; and, second, whether as a result of the lessons of the experience, changes of policy concerning the dispersion of aircraft may be advisable."

After Six Years Leaves Far East—Col. Rufus S. Bratton, for more than six years Assistant Deputy Chief of Staff, G-2, Headquarters, Far East Command, has been awarded the Third Oak Leaf Cluster to the Legion of Merit. The award was made by General Mark W. Clark, Commander-in-Chief, United Nations Command, prior to the departure of Colonel Bratton for the United States.

Will Study in Switzerland—Lt. Comdr. Robert G. Mills, USN, is currently undergoing six months of preparatory study at the Engineering School of the Naval Postgraduate School, Monterey, Calif., before leaving for study at the Swiss Federal Institute of Technology in Zurich. A 1942 graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy and a recipient of a master of science degree from Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1948—he was top man in his class—Commander Mills has served three years in the production department at the Mare Island, Calif., Naval Shipyard and two years as design superintendent at the San Francisco, Calif., Naval Shipyard.

In Switzerland, he will pursue advanced studies at the doctorate level in subjects allied with naval engineering.

Marine Corps Selections

weight, can prevent a selection board from giving the officer serious consideration for advancement.

This section contains all orders promulgating the result of a trial by general or special court-martial, letters of censure and related correspondence, correspondence concerning marital difficulties which reflect unfavorably on the officer's moral attitude or conduct. Reports of misconduct or complaints from civilian sources are filed here, as well as the final action taken on these matters.

Unfavorable comments in forwarding endorsements on special requests go into the file, as do letters regarding inspections containing unfavorable comments which reflect on the officer individually. Included, too, is any correspondence which indicates that the officer has numerous or heavy debts, or that he is indifferent to indebtedness.

If the officer is hospitalized because of his own misconduct, the file contains all correspondence and forms relative to medical surveys made in connection with such hospitalization. If he is found responsible for loss of Government property by a Board of Survey, statements of disciplinary action taken in the case are included.

Disapproved requests for special duty or training are included when they reflect unfavorably on the officer, as are requests of CO's for the reassignment of an officer when such requests reflect unfavorably on him.

In all cases, the officer concerned is permitted to file statements regarding any or all of the unfavorable material, and the statements are made a part of the official record also.

Fitness Reports

The final section of the Selection Board Jacket contains fitness reports and correspondence relative to incorrect, incomplete, or missing fitness reports. Also included are statements by the officer concerned, the reporting senior, or the reviewing officer relative to a fitness report. Letters of commendation or censure attached to fitness reports remain in this section when they have not previously been forwarded for filing.

This section of the folder completes the written "picture" of the officer for the Marine selection board. The fitness report tells the board how the officer performs his duties, how proficient he is in handling his men, in training personnel, in his handling of other officers and the tactical handling of troops.

It tells the board the degree of physical and mental ability the officer has for carrying on under fatiguing conditions. It labels his military bearing, cooperation, initiative, judgment, and many other traits of character. This report, Headquarters states, is "vital in determining assignments to duty and in selection for promotion."

The complete official record is "vital," for that matter. In many respects this record is the officer. It represents him at many important steps in his Marine career when he, physically, may be many hundreds of miles distant.

Ask Pay Increase

The procedure now will likely be as follows. At the proper time, the Pentagon will submit data to the White House showing the need for an adjustment in military pay. In view of the statements made this week by Mr. Lovett and Mrs. Rosenberg, it can be said these officials feel reasonably certain the proposal for a pay increase will have White House approval.

After the President gives his endorsement, Pentagon officials then will begin conferences with Bureau of the Budget officials in the drafting of legislation.

With this early start on the planning and inter-departmental processing—the Coast Guard (Treasury), Public Health Service (Federal Security Agency) and Coast and Geodetic Survey (Commerce) are affected, as well as the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps—there is no reason why a bill cannot be ready for action on Capitol Hill shortly after Congress reconvenes in January.

Following the statements by Secretary Lovett and Assistant Secretary Rosenberg, the likelihood now is that other Defense officials will speak out on the need for an upward adjustment in military pay scales.

Order Voodoo Jets

An Air Force production contract for an undisclosed number of F-101 Voodoo twin-jet strategic fighters has been received by McDonnell Aircraft Corp., St. Louis, Mo., according to the firm's president, James S. McDonnell, Jr. The dollar value of the contract was not disclosed for security reasons.

The F-101 was recently described by Air Force Chief of Staff, General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, as a new type long-range fighter for the Air Force's Strategic Air Command.

The airplane's performance figures cannot be revealed. The Voodoo is designed to escort bombers and attack distant targets.

"This order plus other orders that have been received from both the Navy and the Air Force since the end of our fiscal year on 30 June 1952, has raised our company's backlog to almost $400,000,000," said Mr. McDonnell in making the announcement.

Previously it had been announced that McDonnell had an Air Force contract for preparing for production of the Voodoo. The production order came as an amendment to the original contract and called for a specific number of the fighters to be built.

GMC Consolidation

President C. E. Wilson of General Motors this week announced that the corporation's Aeroproducts Division at Dayton, Ohio, was consolidated with the Allison Division of Indianapolis, Ind., effective 16 Sept.

The purpose of the consolidation is to "effect a further coordination of activities between General Motors aircraft engine and propeller operations," Mr. Wilson said. "This will place both divisions in a position to better serve the military services and aircraft manufacturers—the principal customers of both divisions," he said.

Aeroproducts is a leading designer and supplier of propellers for reciprocating and turbine engines while Allison is America's largest designer and builder of gas turbine engines for aircraft.

Pioneered by Gilfillan

first GCA Radar

...developed by Gilfillan in collaboration with the Radiation Laboratory at M. I. T. in World War II. The war's most complex radar development. The original Gilfillan GCA weighed 22 tons, required a 5-man crew.

1945
first Azel Scope

...exclusively the product of Gilfillan research. This 3-dimensional scope shows position of the aircraft in altitude, azimuth and exact range. Azel changed GCA radar from a five-man to a simplified one-man operation.

first MTI

...The Gilfillan-developed Moving Target Indicator eliminated ground clutter, and need of tedious concentration of a special radar operator—shows position of aircraft instantly to all CAA tower personnel.

1948
first GCA "Streamlining"

...Gilfillan's world-wide experience in the field has resulted in many operational and mechanical improvements such as the present compact desk-size GCA console, compared to the 22-ton wartime trailer.

today's Gilfillan GCA Radar

...is the only GCA now proven and in operation in both U. S. Civil and Military airports. It extends search coverage to 10,000 feet altitude over a 50-mile radius — a twenty-fold increase over original GCA surveillance!

tomorrow's Radar Developments

...now in progress at Gilfillan — further GCA improvements — other top secret projects in varying stages... research, design, mock-up, production. In radar, now as for four decades past, the first name is Gilfillan.

In GCA and Radar
research, design and production
—the FIRST name is...
